Night Time Pedestrian Safety

The Ashland Traffic Safety Commission reminds Pedestrians that wearing bright clothing at night when crossing a street can dramatically improve your chance of being seen by motorists. A study conducted by Cornell University has shown that pedestrians wearing dark colors at night are first seen by motorists at about 55 feet away but a driver going just 20 mph needs at least 64 feet to stop, even on dry pavement!

Retroreflective materials, which direct light back at the motorist, give pedestrians the highest

Welcome to the new Mayor and Council Members

On January 5th the newest members of our Ashland City Council were sworn in. This is part two in our continuing series highlighting our new Council. Here, in her own words, is a mini biography for Council Member Carol Voisin:

Ashland is a magnetic city attracting residents that are creative and outspoken with a diversity of opinions. The creativity is found in the depth of the artistic community from OSF to independent artists and musicians, as well as those who have ideas about everything! The degree of diversity and activism keeps the city on edge, and that's what makes Ashland an incredibly dynamic and rich city in which to live.

The magnetic force of Ashland attracted me. When I decided to escape the congestion and whirlwind existence of the Bay Area, I came to the visibility at night. A pedestrian wearing white is first seen at around 180 feet but a pedestrian wearing something retroreflective is first seen from 500 feet away, allowing a motorist going even 60 mph more than enough time to stop.

Ultimately, we are all responsible for our own safety and should never attempt to delegate that responsibility to others, especially when crossing a busy street. Let's all be aware, alert, and make choices to improve our safety in the crosswalk. ▼ place that drew me to it with its rich cultural offerings and a forward looking city. Having been a small business owner, I decided to return to teaching at Southern Oregon University. Before owning a small business, I was director of continuing education at Duke Divinity School and before then at the Graduate Theological Union and Pacific School of Religion in Berkeley.

Even though my work occupied a good deal of my life, I always found time to be involved in the local community from the League of Women Voters to the city commissions.

Upon setting up residence in Ashland, my desire to be involved in the local community became paramount. I became a commissioner on the Ashland Housing Commission and joined the local Democratic Party and League of Women Voters. As the political scene became dire, I decided to stop whining and do something. I won the Democratic primary for the 2nd Congressional District, but lost the general election. From this experience, I learned the importance of listening to the concerns of real people, because that is the truth that needs a voice.

Because I along with many others want to see Ashland become a model of sustainability while being fiscally responsible, I decided to run for city council. Ashland has an opportunity to lead the Northwest if not our country and I want to be a part of this groundswell and to lure Ashlanders to get involved and to make a difference in the world in which we live. ▼

The City of Ashland now offers customers the opportunity to pay their utility bill on-line using Visa or MasterCard. To protect customer identity, utility customers are required to complete a form and provide photo identification in person at the Utility Office at City Hall. Customer will then receive an email from the City with a password and directions to pay their bill on-line. For more information, call the Utility Office at 488-6004.

Ragland Award Volunteer Spirit Community Service Award

Each year, the Mayor and City Council recognize an Ashland citizen for their volunteer spirit and contribution to the Ashland community.

The Volunteer Spirit Community Service Award was established by the Mayor and Council in 1994 in honor of James M. Ragland. Mr. Ragland was a former councilor and planning commissioner who was involved in numerous citizen volunteer efforts.

A committee of the Mayor and Council review the nominations and determine the annual award winner. Criteria is based on public sector volunteer service performed, length of service, absence of adequate recognition in the past, and any other attributes the nominee may have that should be considered. Consideration is also given to people to volunteer hours beyond their regular work day to perform a service that benefits the community. The award is given annually during the second City Council meeting in April each year. This year's award will be presented at the April 21 Council meeting.

If you know of an individual or organization you would like to nominate for the Volunteer Spirit Community Service Award, please answer the questions listed on page 2 on a separate sheet of paper and return it to the Mayor's office, 20

E. Main Street, Ashland, Oregon 97520, by Friday, March 13, 2009. You may also download the nomination form at the city's website www.ashland.or.us or pick up a form at City Hall. For more information please call 488-6002.
