Sustainable Shopping Initiative Goes Into Affect January 1

House Bill (HB) 2509, which was passed by the Oregon Legislature in 2019, now prohibits retail stores and restaurants from providing single-use checkout bags to customers and requires a fee charged for offering certain types of reusable or recycled bags statewide. Ashland has had a ban on single-use plastic carryout bags for retailers and requires retailers to charge ten cents for any recyclable paper bags offered, per AMC 9.21. While the ten cent fee still applies with the new State rule, restaurants will now be required to comply with the bag ban.

What types of bags require fees?

	✓ No fee required	$ Fee required	⊘ Prohibited
 Retail stores	Reusable fabric bags, if offered as a promotion (no more than 12 days per year)	Recycled paper bags* Reusable plastic bags* Reusable fabric bags	Single-use bags
 Restaurants	Recycled paper bags	Reusable plastic bags*	Single-use bags

*Exceptions include:

- Bags designed to hold bulk items, such as small hardware or for sanitary or privacy purposes;
- Certain specialty bags, such as garment bags; and
- Bags sold in a package for uses, such as food storage, garbage, or pet waste.

What does this mean for you?

If you forget to bring your reusable bag, a fee (ten cents for Ashland and at least five cents for other communities) will be charged per bag at the register. The fee is kept by businesses to help them purchase more sustainable bags. Retailers and restaurants may provide the bags for free for WIC and EB card holders.

Winter Water News

It's exciting to watch the snow accumulate and not just because we like to ski and snowboard!

Our municipal drinking water comes from rain and snow that falls in the Ashland Creek Watershed and on Mount Ashland. So, the more snow we get the more water we have available for the summer months, especially if colder temperatures can stick around. It's fun to imagine that the snow falling today could be used in and around our homes this upcoming summer (after it's been treated, of course.)

Throughout the winter months, water professionals monitor the snowpack and "snow water equivalent" (SWE) in our watershed to help assess what the water supply might look like for the upcoming year. This is typically done by collecting data from manual and automatic "SNOTEL" (Snow Telemetry) sites in or around our watershed. One SNOTEL site we consult is called Big Red Mountain. This site is designed to measure snow depth, snow water equivalent, temperature, wind, solar radiation and a number of other climate related factors. Situated at 6,050 feet near Mt. Ashland, Big Red gives us a pretty good idea of what the snowpack and SWE is in our watershed.

So what exactly is "Snow Water Equivalent"? Well, imagine if you were able to melt all the snow for an entire area instantaneously and then measure the volume of water that resulted...that is the snow water equivalent. Interestingly, it is not as easy as just measuring snow depth. You also need to know the density of the snow, and snow density is dependent on many factors including elevation, the temperature outside when the snow fell, how long it's been on the ground, wind, melting, and recrystallization. To view the interactive snow survey map, follow this link <https://www.nrcs.usda.gov/wps/portal/nrcs/detailfull/or/snow/?cid=stelprdb1266968>

TRAFFIC SAFETY CORNER: Rules of the Road for an Uncontrolled Intersection

When there are no traffic signals or road signs to help you determine the right-of-way, exercise caution and use the following simple rules to determine who has the right-of-way.

- The vehicle that arrived to the intersection first has the right-of-way.
- If two vehicles arrive at the intersection at roughly the same time, the driver of the vehicle on the left must give way to the driver of the vehicle on the right.

When making a left turn, yield to all oncoming traffic EVEN if you were the first one to enter the intersection.

Make Your New Year Bright with Rebates and Freebies!

The winter months are a great time to plan for how to best use water throughout the year. Consider scheduling an Indoor Water Use Evaluation or taking advantage of our water and energy efficient appliance rebates.

In addition, as an Ashland resident, you are eligible for free low flow showerheads and faucet aerators. Just stop by the Community Development building at 51 Winburn Way to pick them up. Remember, even small hardware changes can make a big difference in how much water we use. So, why not take advantage of this opportunity and take that little step to save water today!
